

Your Employee and Family Assistance Program is a support service that can help you take the first step toward change.

Retirement planning: when will you be able to retire?

With today's computerized projections, it's easier than ever to see where you stand for your retirement.

You may be ahead of schedule, thanks to years of strong markets. But if those calculations suggest you won't be able to retire when you want, you may need to make some adjustments to your plan.

Review and adjust

Here are some ways that you can adjust your plan following a review:

Increase savings and/or seek higher returns.

- Delay your ideal retirement date by a year or two.
- Factor in some part-time work as a retiree.
- Consider simplifying your lifestyle plans. Statistics Canada reported recently that the average middle class person retired on 54 per cent of pre-retirement income, not the standard 70 per cent that most people assume.

Additional pension considerations

When it comes to your pension, be sure to consider these issues:

- Given the current economic outlook, what are reasonable assumptions for long-term investment returns and inflation?
- Is your life expectancy assumption reasonable? On average, Canadians are living longer than ever. Have you or your spouse developed any major medical concerns?
- Does your plan adequately meet your needs for estate management?
- Recent years have brought income tax cuts for many people. How does that affect your plan?

Remember, retirement planning is not a one-time event. It is important to revisit your projections every few years—even annually if you're within 10 years of retirement.

© 2026 LifeWorks (Canada) Ltd. Your program may not include all services described on this website, please refer to your benefit material for more information. For immediate assistance, call 1.844.880.9137.